Distributed Workforces: Impact on Human Resource Functions

August 25th, 2021

12 P.M.-1 P.M. EST

Watch Here

In 2020- 2021 the world has seen an unprecedented growth in distributed employees as a consequence of COVID-19. Distributed workforces use a variety of telecommunication networks and tools to establish connectivity as well as provide organizational policies and procedures, email and interactive meetings. Distributed teams encompass organizations that (1) offer flexible work arrangements and whose employees work out of home offices rather than on site and (2) have employees who are geographically distant. Employers have acknowledged that managing distributed employees is different than managing employees on site, noting it is difficult to keep employees engaged and connected.

Join Megan Salavantis, Dr. Michele Paludi, and Dr. Craig Nathansen for a discussion of the impact of COVID-19 on all aspects of HR functions.
