

Now you can help your community in a new way.

Compassionate and caring social workers have never been in higher demand.

According to the American Journal of Preventive Medicine, at least 44 million adults in the United States experience a diagnosable mental illness, and among the nation's youth, rates of severe depression are on the rise. Demand for behavioral health care is higher than ever, while access is diminishing. This is due to a number of factors including geographic disparities, inequitable community investment, the opioid epidemic an aging population and turnover of workers within social work. But you can make a difference with a MSW degree from Herzing University.

Designed for non-social work bachelor's degree holders seeking a new, rewarding career path.

SPECIALIZATIONS

When you enroll in the Herzing MSW program, you will choose one of three unique specializations:

MENTAL HEALTH

Develop an understanding of mental health assessment, diagnosis and intervention. Learn theories of human behavior, trauma and diversity—and how to apply this knowledge to mental health provision and wellbeing. Discover policies and laws related to mental health systems and become familiar with the service delivery structure of public and private mental health facilities.

MEDICAL SOCIAL WORK

Build an understanding of medical diagnoses in the context of a person-in-environment model. Study social work intervention strategies including crisis intervention, biopsychosocial assessment, and trauma-informed clinical approaches. Immerse yourself in a curriculum focusing on how you can utilize evidence-based social work research in clinical practice of community public health and prevention services.

CHILDREN, FAMILIES AND AGING SERVICES

Become an advocate for vulnerable children, families and elderly clients in need of assistance. Build your understanding of social problems and their impact on individuals, families and their communities across all age groups. This specialization explores the delivery structure of social services and how you can become a key facilitator of protective services for pediatric and gerontological clients.
